RETIREMENT OF ROBERT ABBEY

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today on the occasion of his retirement, to honor the 27 years of public service of Robert V. Abbey of Reno, NV. Bob hails originally from Mississippi. He was born in Clarksdale and earned his Bachelors Degree in Resource Management at the University of Southern Mississippi. Over the past 8 years, I am proud to say he has become a Nevadan.

Bob began his public service working for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Later he moved to the Bureau of Land Management where he has distinguished himself as a dedicated land manager, visionary leader, and exceptional citizen.

Bob's early career at BLM included tours of duty as a budget analyst in Washington D.C.; assistant district manager in Yuma, AZ, district manager in Jackson, MS; and associate and acting state director in Colorado. Since the fall of 1997, Bob has served as the Nevada State director of the BLM. His job may very well be the toughest in Nevada and perhaps in the ranks of the BLM; in any case, it is among the most important for both.

Although his address has changed many times during his career, his commitment to public lands and public service has never wavered. The West and Nevada are better for it.

Today, Bob Abbey leads a staff of 750 employees who manage 48 million acres of public land in Nevada. He has led the Nevada BLM during an exciting and historic time. Increased public land use, record population growth, evolving management mandates and shrinking budgets represent just a few of the challenges facing the Nevada BLM. Bob Abbey has handled every difficulty with grace and vision.

During his tenure, Bob directed the implementation of the Southern Nevada Public Lands Management Act. This is no small task given that Clark County, NV leads the Nation in sustained growth and development and ever increasing recreational use of public lands.

Bob and his staff also helped me and the other members of the Nevada Congressional Delegation in the development of the Clark and Lincoln County land bills. These bills were among the most significant public lands legislation in the 107th and 108th Congresses, respectively, and Bob's leadership helped make them possible.

Bob's motto that we have more in common than our differences has set the tone for the best working relationships between Federal land managers and Nevadans in my memory. He has inspired his employees to solve problems, take pride in their work, and serve the public with distinction. The results serve as testament to his character, courage, and conviction.

At the end of next week, Bob Abbey will retire from Federal service with a remarkable record of achievements. But perhaps his greatest contribution as a land manager will come to fruition while he is enjoying his retirement with his wife Linda.

After wildfires devastated vast swaths of rangeland in Nevada and other Western States in 1999 and 2000, Bob played a key role in crafting a blueprint for rangeland and ecosystem restoration in the West. The so-called Great Basin Restoration Initiative is a grand vision and roadmap for healing the landscape in Nevada. Unfortunately, to date, the BLM and Department of Interior have yet to match Bob's vision with appropriate funding. It is my hope that this is a temporary delay and that one day soon, a thriving Great Basin ecosystem will serve as the enduring legacy of Bob Abbey's public service.

Although I regret that Bob Abbey is retiring, I know I speak for thousands of Nevadans when I thank him for his exemplary public service and wish him well with his future endeavors. We know Bob has made Nevada and our Nation a better place.

TRIBUTE TO CARLOS A. GARCIA

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure that I say farewell to one of Clark County's most effective and innovative superintendents, Carlos A. Garcia.

I have worked with Carlos for several years and have had the pleasure of seeing first-hand his work as superintendent of Clark County schools, the fifth largest school district in the Nation.

I believe that one of the reasons he has acclimated so well to Clark County, and Las Vegas in particular, is because he grew up in Los Angeles. After graduating from high school in L.A., he earned bachelor's and master's degrees from Claremont College and an administrative credential in educational administration from California State University.

He developed experience as a teacher and principal in California. After several years, including serving as principal at a National Blue Ribbon School, he eventually became the superintendent of the Fresno Unified School District. When Carlos Garcia arrived in Clark County, he began to reorganize. He divided the county into regions; he began to address achievements and accountability; and he championed the cause of educating Nevada's young people to parents, teachers, business leaders and lawmakers.

It has been my pleasure to participate in different events and discussions with Carlos. We sat around a table with the other 16 superintendents in Nevada to discuss the No Child Left Behind

Act. As a result of his organization and participation, I was able to come back to Washington with a clear idea of what Nevada's school districts needed. His leadership of the superintendents was impressive, and the mutual respect was apparent.

Together, Carlos and I welcomed 60 new teachers from the Teach for America program. As a result of this venture, I am a cosponsor of legislation that will ensure that recruiting, training, and supporting this teacher corps will be supported by the Congress. When it comes to our school children and teachers, he always has a plan and always looks toward the future.

Now, Carlos has a new future to plan: his own. I am sorry that I cannot be there to shake his hand. Thank you, Carlos, for being dedicated to providing the children of Clark County with a first-rate public education. All the best to you.

POTENTIAL SUPREME COURT VACANCY

Mr. REID. Mr. President, as the Senate prepares to adjourn for the July 4 recess, one of the most noteworthy developments is an event that has not occurred. Despite widespread speculation, there have been no announced retirements from the United States Supreme Court.

We are all aware that Chief Justice Rehnquist has faced health challenges. I am impressed with his courage and fortitude.

Many feared he would not be able to attend the January inauguration to administer the oath of office to President Bush. But there he was, braving the cold to perform his constitutional duty. Many thought he would retire from the Court long before the end of the Supreme Court term. But there he was last Monday, presiding over the Court's final session, and announcing an important First Amendment decision in which he had authored the majority opinion.

I was not a member of the Senate when William Rehnquist was nominated as an Associate Justice in 1971 or when he was promoted to be Chief Justice in 1986. He was not unanimously confirmed to either position. But the Chief Justice has won many new admirers in the Senate in recent years. We appreciate the dignity and clarity with which he has led the Federal judiciary for almost 20 years. I know I speak for all of my colleagues in commending Chief Justice Rehnquist for his tremendous service to the Court and to the country. I hope he stays on the bench for years to come.

Whenever the Chief Justice or any of the Associate Justices decide to retire, I hope and expect that the President will take seriously the "Advice" part of "Advice and Consent." This is not just about the Supreme Court. The President should seek the advice of the Senate regarding all nominees. But consultation regarding a Supreme Court vacancy is especially important.
